Yoga for Metabolic Health

This month, we're excited to welcome back Leila Stuart, RMT (retired), certified yoga therapist (C-IAYT), BA, LLB, for a webinar exploring how yoga can support metabolic health in practical, sustainable ways.

Leila will discuss how yoga can improve insulin sensitivity, lower stress hormones, enhance sleep, reduce inflammation, and strengthen interoceptive awareness to support long-term lifestyle change. With her extensive background in yoga therapy, movement education, and mind-body integration, Leila offers a grounded, accessible approach to supporting whole-person health.

Hormone-Supportive Breakfast Wrap

INGREDIENTS

1/2 cup	crumbled firm Tofu (or 2 eggs, scrambled)
1 tsp.	Olive Oil
1 tsp.	Nutritional Yeast
1/4 tsp.	Turmeric
1/4 cup	Spinach or Kale, chopped
2 - 3 tbsp.	Carrots, grated or Bell Peppers, chopped
1/4	Avocado, sliced or mashed
1 tbsp.	Hummus
1 - 2 tbsp.	Tzatziki (or to taste)
1 tsp.	Hemp Hearts
1	Whole-Grain tortilla or wrap
	Salt & Pepper to taste

OPTIONAL ADD-INS

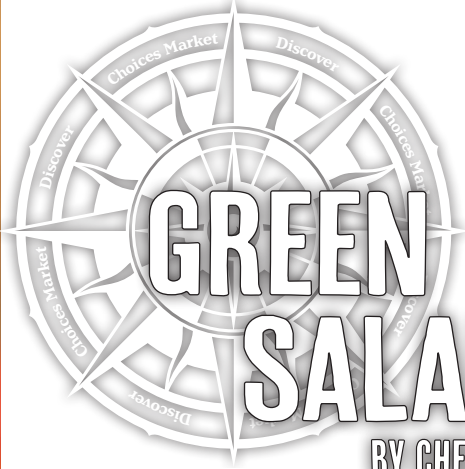

Fresh Herbs (parsley, cilantro)
Pinch of chili flakes
Squeeze of lemon

DIRECTIONS

1. Heat olive oil in a pan over medium heat. Add crumbled tofu or scrambled eggs along with nutritional yeast, turmeric, salt and pepper. Cook 2 - 3 minutes until warmed through and lightly golden.
2. Add spinach or kale and cook until wilted. Stir in grated carrot or bell peppers.
3. Warm the tortilla in a dry pan or microwave.
4. Spread hummus across the wrap, then add a layer of tzatziki.
5. Add herbs or a squeeze of lemon if desired.
6. Roll tightly into a wrap. Enjoy warm or wrap in foil for an easy on-the-go breakfast.

Spring brings us an amazing garden of edible leaves. The name might be leafy greens, but they encompass endless varieties and colours. Just think, chard and beet tops are two of the most popular, plus Radicchio and Belgian endive. All of which are in the category, but not green in colour.

Leafy greens all have a unique taste. Some are preferable mainly eaten raw in salads with a nice dressing. From the mild tasting lettuces like Butter, Green and Red Leaf, Lola Rosa, Oak Leaf, Lambs Lettuce, to stronger flavoured like Romaine, or stronger still like Endives, Frisee, Curly Endive and Escarole, each can leave a delicious note in your salad. Possibly the strongest and bitterest green in our stores racks, dandelion greens, are another healthy addition you could consider. Other leaves are distinctively peppery. Mustard greens, arugula and watercress are classic examples. Some leaves can also be eaten cooked and hold up to high temperatures, like romaine or endive. Watercress is classic in soup, or sauteed dandelion greens.

When you start cooking your leafy greens, you add even more options. Once cooked you can enjoy them on their own, or use them in an ingredient in other recipes. On the cooked leafy green front, that some people love raw, you can find spinach, kale and most cabbages, including green, savoy and napa. Personally I prefer most of these cooked, but to each their own. Bok choy, broccoli rabe or rapini, collard greens, lacinato kale, kohlrabi and radish tops all can be gently steamed, braised or tossed in a stir fry for an added nutritional punch. Think of using cooked greens as fillings for dumplings or pasta, in savoury cakes, fritters, or in egg based or vegan items like frittata, quiche or bajas.

What about fermented? Sauerkraut or spicy kimchi! There's a million ways to use the endless varieties of greens. All cuisines have delicious recipes that just wouldn't be the same without a bright dose of greens. Of course, all greens have a seasonality, and learning when to buy them will help you with your menu and your wallet.

Enjoy the beauty of the greens rainbow!

LEAFY GREENS FACTS:

*Dark Leaves =
More Nutrients:*

Generally, darker green leaves contain more vitamins and minerals than pale varieties.

Growing Season:

Most salad greens prefer cool weather, so they grow best in spring and fall.

Quick to Grow:

Many leafy greens can be ready to harvest in 30-45 days, making them popular for home gardens.

How Can Yoga Transform Your Metabolic Health

By: Leila Stuart, RMT(retired), certified yoga therapist (C-IAYT), BA, LLB

When most people think about improving blood pressure or managing blood sugar, they picture intense cardio sessions or strict diets. Fortunately, emerging research suggests that a consistent gentle yoga practice could be one of the most powerful (and underestimated) tools in your metabolic health toolkit. And much easier!

Long before metabolic health was a clinical concept, yoga's ancient wisdom taught that a balanced body, conscious breathing, and a calm mind support health on every level.

The five key indicators of metabolic health are blood sugar, triglycerides, cholesterol, blood pressure, and waist circumference. Chronic stress quietly undermines all five. It prompts the liver to release glucose into the bloodstream, keeping blood sugar elevated even between meals, while driving up cortisol, worsening insulin resistance and disrupting lipid metabolism. Studies have shown that yoga meaningfully reduces fasting blood glucose, lipid levels, and BMI, while directly lowering cortisol and improving the body's sensitivity to insulin. Yoga improves all five indicators of metabolic health, plus much more.

What makes yoga uniquely effective is its multidimensional approach to health. Physical practice builds strength, flexibility, and lean muscle mass, all of which improve blood sugar regulation. Breathwork calms the nervous system and lowers blood pressure. Meditation and mindfulness help to balance your emotions, sharpen focus and empower you to embrace and sustain healthier habits.

Even 20–30 minutes of yoga a few times per week can produce measurable results within weeks. Whether you're managing prediabetes, working on your numbers, or simply want more energy, your yoga mat is a great place to start. If you can breathe, you can do yoga!

Ready to take the next step?

Join Leila online on May 26 for a presentation and guided yoga practice for metabolic health. See the Seminars page for details.

Women's Hormonal Health: Three Food Groups That Support Balance

By: The Choices Nutrition Team

Hormones influence energy, mood, appetite, sleep, and overall wellbeing. Since May is Women's Health Month, this article highlights how nutrition can support women's hormonal health. The same principles apply to all people, and these foods offer wide-ranging benefits for anyone looking to support long-term health.

Healthy Fats for Hormone Production and

Inflammation Support: Hormones are built from fat, which makes healthy fats an essential part of a hormone-supportive diet. Omega-3 rich foods such as salmon, walnuts, avocados, flaxseed, and extra-virgin olive oil help reduce inflammation and support the body's natural hormone-making processes. Including a source of healthy fat at meals can also help stabilize energy and support cognitive health and mood.

Plant Proteins and Phytoestrogens: Plant-based proteins such as tofu, tempeh, edamame, lentils, nuts, and seeds provide both protein and phytoestrogens. These naturally occurring compounds may gently support estrogen balance, which can be especially helpful during perimenopause and menopause when estrogen levels begin to shift. Research shows that phytoestrogens do not lower testosterone or negatively affect hormone levels in men and may even support prostate and heart health.

Fibre for Gut Health and Estrogen Metabolism:

Fibre plays a critical role in gut health, which is closely connected to hormone metabolism. A healthy gut microbiome helps process and eliminate excess estrogen, supporting more stable hormonal patterns.

Fibre-rich foods such as vegetables, fruits, whole grains, beans, and seeds also help regulate blood sugar and insulin balance.

These three food groups support hormonal balance and are also linked with benefits for heart health, blood sugar control, blood pressure, and reduced cancer risk, making them valuable additions to everyday eating for people of all ages.

YOGGU! PLANT-BASED YOGURT

Yoggu! offers a rich, coconut-based yogurt made with minimal ingredients and no gums, fillers, or artificial additives. It's entirely plant-based, gluten-free, and free from common allergens, making it a gentle option for many families. As a womxn-owned brand based in Vancouver, Yoggu brings a local, thoughtful approach to dairy-free yogurt. Like other yogurts, it provides a satisfying source of energy to help keep you fueled throughout the day, making it an especially helpful option for vegan or dairy-sensitive children. It works beautifully in parfaits, smoothies, desserts, or simply topped with fruit and granola.

HENRY'S TEMPEH

Henry's Tempeh is crafted from organic, non-GMO Canadian soybeans using a traditional whole-food fermentation process that enhances digestibility and nutrient availability. Soy foods like tempeh are well-researched for supporting healthy cholesterol levels, stabilizing blood sugar, and offering protective benefits against certain cancers. With its firm texture and mild, nutty flavour, Henry's Tempeh is easy to slice, marinate, and add to stir-fries, grain bowls, wraps, or salads for a satisfying plant-based protein source.

HEALX FOODS CAULIFLOWER FRIES

Healx Cauliflower Fries are a Canadian-made, women-owned product crafted with minimal ingredients and no gluten, gums, or artificial additives. Made primarily from cauliflower, they offer a fun, veggie-forward alternative to traditional fries while providing naturally occurring vitamins, minerals, and fibre. Their crisp texture and mild flavour make them a versatile side dish for family meals, or an easy way to add more vegetables to snacks and lunches.

GENUINE HEALTH PROTEIN POWDER

Genuine Health Fermented Organic Vegan Proteins+ powders provide a clean, plant-based source of protein made with non-GMO ingredients and no artificial colours, flavours, or sweeteners. Naturally vegan and gluten-free, their blends offer a smooth texture and a balanced amino acid profile, along with a meaningful source of iron, which can be especially helpful for those following plant-forward diets. They mix easily into smoothies, oatmeal, yogurt bowls, or baked goods for a simple way to boost daily protein intake.

Nutritious Chocolate Mug Cake

INGREDIENTS

PROTEINS

1 Ripe	Banana, mashed
1	Egg or 1/4 cup soft tofu (blended smooth)
1 tbsp.	Cocoa Powder
2 tbsp.	Rolled Oats
1 tbsp.	Ground Flaxseed
1 tbsp.	Almond Butter or Peanut Butter
1/4 tsp.	Cinnamon
Pinch	Salt
1 - 2 tsp.	Maple Syrup (optional)
1 - 2 tbsp.	Dark Chocolate Chips or chopped dark chocolate (optional)

OPTIONAL ADD-INS

Collagen is one of the most important structural components in our body. It represents 1/15th of our total body weight, and 75% of our skin is composed of collagen. This fibre-shaped protein plays an important role in ensuring the cohesion, elasticity and regeneration of skin, joints, tendons, ligaments, and skeletal muscles.

Collagen peptides are used daily by millions of people around the world. It has a long history of use in food and natural health products in both Asia and Europe. TruFact: not all collagen is created equal. Hydrolyzed marine collagen sourced from wild fish scales (that's us!) generates bioactive peptides, which enhances the production of collagen, skin hydration, hair growth, and joint health. The growing popularity of marine collagen is due not only to its nutritional benefits, but also its superior bioavailability, and purity.
